

Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/14 17:26

A board to discuss about foods of Spain of and Latin America (Mexico too.) You can write in Spanish if you want, but I've lost the paper that says which keys to press for the different symbols, and I know some people find it annoying when a word doesn't have the accents because it can mean a different thing....I'll start:

Has anyone ever heard of "pastel de chorros"? My Chilean friend made some for me and they were absolutley scrumptious. It has a doughy consitancy and is dark orange colored. It tastes like a mixture of chocolate and something I can't place my tounge on (hah).

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by obsesionada09 - 2006/12/14 17:28

Sounds really good! And I haven't eaten yet today! :O

Personally, I love Spanish cuisine...paella of course. I have yet to try tapas, though. :(

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/14 17:30

Mmmm....paella is very good. My Chilean friend says the enchiladas are very pouplar in Chile, and she eats them a lot.

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by queenmania28 - 2006/12/16 08:19

wait, is pastel de chorros basically churros? i like those things. they're very similar to sopapillas.

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by caylerp - 2006/12/16 15:50

prefiero comida mexicana. mis favoritos son molé, chile relleno, pazole y tacos de lengua.

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by obsesionada09 - 2006/12/16 17:15

mmm...chiles rellenos. :D

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/16 20:56

wait, is pastel de chorros basically churros? i like those things. they're very similar to sopapillas.

No. They're nothing like them. But churros are super good. If you ever go to Disney and you go to the Mexican Pavillion, they have churros. The best part is that you can order in Spanish because all the workers in the Mexican Pavillion are Mexican :). I ordered a margarita for my aunt there, in Spanish awhile back when my Spanish was very slim. The man started speaking to me very fast, asuming I knew Spanish but I had no clue what he said. If I went there now, I probably could understand him.

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by queenmania28 - 2006/12/17 10:33

it's like that in all the hotels in Chicago, except I haven't been since I started spanish...

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/17 11:45

The McDonald's in Conneticut are just like that too. I went to one once and all of the workers were Latino. It was crazy. I didn't see anybody of a different origin there.

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by queenmania28 - 2006/12/17 12:45

I find that strange. Maybe President Bush went to a Connecticut McDonald's and that's why immigration is such a big deal now...

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/17 14:24

Hahah....suprisingly enough there are TONS of Latinos in New England. It's shocking. My next door neighbor is Puerto Rican, their next door neighbor is Puerto Rican and I know over 10 people who can speak Spanish just in my small town!

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by obsesionada09 - 2006/12/17 15:13

That is too awesome, margarita!!! :D :D :D

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/17 16:53

Yes! I should be very thankful that I don't have a problem obtaining any Spanish speakers to talk with. Plus, the nearby hospital hires translators for them, and they pay very high, so I was considering that as maybe a future career, but I don't think so. I don't want to learn medical things, like bones parts in Spanish. I just want to stick with normal everyday words! I think learning the names of bones, arteries, joints, and muscles in Spanish would be too much. My mom studied anatomy about 4 years ago and earned her degree and she had such a tough time with that....and THAT was in ENGLISH.

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by queenmania28 - 2006/12/17 18:31

dunno...i was thinking more along the lines of like police and court translations for the present...later law degree and criminal prosecution/defense

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/17 18:33

That's very true also.

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by queenmania28 - 2006/12/17 18:36

i like the legal system, just because i think like a debater. my english teacher dubbed me "future lawyer of the year" after the mock trial...

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/17 18:39

I love debating and arguing, even though it's one of my worser habits! My family has dubbed me the nickname "The Little Fighter".....I would secretly call myslef, "Luchita" though instead.....

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by queenmania28 - 2006/12/17 18:43

i like it...everyone thinks it's hilarious to prove the freshman wrong in etymology(i'm the only freshman) and i win close to always...

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/17 18:46

Yeah....my family finds it quite "hilarious" when I turn the color of a ripe apple when they call me "Little Fighter". My Mom says I'm every tiny bit as Potrguese and Irish as there is in my blood. They also call me "Manuela" after my late uncle Manuel who was a stubborn as a mule and was very independent (me....).

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by queenmania28 - 2006/12/17 18:47

mum just says i'm obnoxious. not untrue, really

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/17 18:49

Haha....just curious, but are you from England because the English tend to say "Mum" and not "Mom". I'd really hate if you said no, then I'd look like a fool, but oh well. Sometimes curiosity can get me nowhere!

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by queenmania28 - 2006/12/17 18:50

actually, just my parents are...i tend to pick up things like that from them though, but i spell like an american

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/17 18:52

Ahh I see. So you live in America? Very interesting. I know someone who's parents are from England. Growing up, she picked up their English accent, but now it's rubbed off.

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by queenmania28 - 2006/12/17 18:55

i didn't really pick it up to begin with. you see, my mum assimilated into england like ten years ago, but her parents still lived here, and she met dad there. mum picked up the accent really fast because she doesn't like to stick out, but since she moved back here, it's faded a little over the years

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by margarita914 - 2006/12/17 18:55

Veó.

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by queenmania28 - 2006/12/17 18:57

i personally think it's a little messed up, but whatever

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by caylerp - 2008/05/01 11:43

Traigo este enlace al alto de este hilo viejo porque me encanta carne asada. Es un articulo sobre los camiones de tacos en Los Angeles, CA. Dispulpeme que es en ingles, sin embargo me encanta comer de camiones de taco y Los Angeles tiene los mejores.

<http://www.latimes.com/news/local/la-me-tacos1-2008may01,1,7311225.story>

Saludos a todos, caylerp

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by gustavo - 2008/05/01 16:20

Si te gusta la carne asada tenés que probar el asado argentino...el verdadero manjar de los dioses...
Saludos!!

=====

Re: Comida!

Posted by caylerp - 2008/05/16 10:20

<http://latimesblogs.latimes.com/lanow/2008/05/tick-tock-tick.html>

Por favor cheque este enlace al LA Times sobre "Taco Libre".

=====

Re:Comida!

Posted by Spanishexpress - 2008/06/04 10:54

La mejor comida la comida Vasca. O si no la Barcelonesa, donde este una buena dieta mediterranea....
O quien dice lo contrario?

=====

Re:Comida!

Posted by ArielleRDJ - 2009/06/23 11:15

That taco-truck-party article was so fun! I'd love to hear more about authentic Spanish restaurants (I'm from the Boston area) and some associated vocab. Thanks!

=====

Re:Comida!

Posted by ekmtap - 2009/10/05 13:26

My favorite Spanish food is paella. So tasty and always so fresh! My next favorite (and definitely much easier to make!) is tortilla espanola. Eggs, potatoes, onions; delicious. I'm getting hungry!

Emily
spanishpod101.com

=====

Re:Comida!

Posted by Blueskies89 - 2009/10/19 23:45

Aye, me gustan mucho las chimichangas! Son deliciosos!

=====